

Urban Anthropology, Anthropology in a City: a City as a Research Subject, a City as a Research Field

Grażyna Ewa Karpińska
(Summary)

The author shows how it is increasingly difficult to describe and understand the city. This situation stems from the inability to determine what the city and the urban lifestyle is, and also validates different ways to learn about the city: through theoretical studies about a city or by the anthropology in a city. In the latter case, a city is a context to academic discussion about contemporary culture, popular culture, global culture. A city creates an important theoretical background for an analysis of different cultural phenomena and categories including: cultural identity, own and other, customs, cultural diversity, tradition and many more.

Keywords: city, urban anthropology, anthropology in a city, ways to learn about the city

Grażyna Ewa Karpińska
University of Lodz
Institute of Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology
Pomorska Str. 149/153
90-236 Lodz, POLAND
karp@uni.lodz.pl