

Tourism, Anthropology, and Local Economic Development

Miglena Goranova

(Summary)

The article offers an analysis of the relationship between tourism and local economic development from an anthropological point of view. The development of tourism is a result of local community policies for the purpose of economic development and the deployment of potential on the ground. The article examines a specific case, Sapareva Banya Municipality, and tracks the changes in the choice of natural and cultural resources for the construction of a tourist destination.

Keywords: tourism; anthropology; local economic development; sustainable development

Miglena Goranova
Department of Anthropology
New Bulgarian University
21 Montevideo St., building II
1618 Sofia, BULGARIA
goranova.miglena@gmail.com